

Take a Morning Paper That Makes Reading a Pleasure—Not Just Another Tiresome Job

NO newspaper is better qualified to start the day right with you than the New York American.

News? We told you yesterday of the extraordinary achievements the paper made only the past week by beating out all other papers on the big stories as they occurred.

But there is even more than news that makes a paper welcome. It must have the sympathetic touch and understanding that builds a community of interest between a publication and its readers—it must do all it can to lighten the dull drabness of life—it must meet the requirements of both the serious and light-hearted—it must be intensely HUMAN.

A paper may be judged by the quality of the talent it employs. Headed by Arthur Brisbane, the greatest editorial writer and shaper of thought the modern world has known, the New York American has the distinction of possessing the finest staff of writers and artists in the entire history of journalism.

In this connection nothing is more convincing than the word of a competitor. Read the following news dispatch that just appeared in newspapers all over the country:

Brisbane's Copy Most Compelling Asserts Curtis

By Universal Service.

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 15.—ARTHUR BRISBANE and Ed Howe lead the world when it comes to turning out compelling copy.

So Cyrus H. K. Curtis, head of the Curtis Publishing Company, told members and guests of the Los Angeles Advertising Club today.

Curtis said the real secret of turning out compelling copy was "possession of that intangible something that enables you to write naturally—to write as you talk."

Such writers, he said, had an irresistible appeal.

SUICIDE WRITES HIS SENSATIONS AS DEATH NEARS

Drinks Poisoned Wine, Turns on Gas and Tries to Shoot Self.

Brooklyn, N. Y.—Still clutching the pencil with which he had scrawled the tragic diary of a suicide's last minutes on the wall, on bits of paper and on the off-cloth covering of the stationery tube, Frank M. Zulauf, fifty, retired business man, was found dead in the gas-filled kitchen of his home.

From the scribbled writings and other evidence in the little room, police reconstructed the story of how Zulauf, despondent over the death of his wife last March, drank presumably poisoned wine, opened all burners in the gas stove, tried to shoot himself with a pistol that misfired and then reeled about in the deadly atmosphere, scratching down the thoughts that came to him in the shadowland between life and death.

"The Gun Don't Work," he wrote a dozen times on the white plaster of the wall. Then, less and less legibly, "The gun don't work." "Still standing up." "The gas is getting me." and, finally, "I sleep."

On the off-cloth was scratched a more detailed record.

"The gas is on. Now for the bullet. She's waiting for me. Good-by. I hope that old gun shoots straight. It's a bum gun; it looks like Satan.

"The Gas is On!"

Good-by. It don't work. But the gas and the wine and the woe of my heart. It's worse than hell.

"It's all for her. Good-by. For her. Will you pray for us? For me and for her? I adored her all my life like a goddess, but the woe in my heart kills. There was none like her. It's all getting me. Good-by."

Zulauf was found with his head on a pillow on the floor, a half-empty cation jug of wine and a pistol, with a cartridge jammed in its chamber, beside him.

George Kils, a neighbor, "discovered the body."

Scribbles on Walls.

Patrolmen August Bessler and Rudolph Herman of the Flatbush station, who answered his alarm, tried in vain to revive Zulauf, after ridding the kitchen of its poisonous fumes. They found, besides the scribbling on the wall and tube, letters addressed by the dead man to his pastor, Rev. Paul Y. Jublet of the Zion Lutheran church in Flatbush; "my executor," Max Betts, Ridgefield road, Fort Washington, L. I.; Mrs. Jenale Ray, Embassy hotel, Manhattan, and one, apparently to the public, which began "Dear Friends."

This read in part: "Please don't mind this. Unpleasant as it may seem, it had to be. It should have been long ago. I will meet her now."

The letter to the minister read: "It is easy. The wine, the gas and then the bullet. It must be past twelve. Good-by, old scout, I'm in a hurry. I go into the other room; will I find her there? God bless you and Merry Christmas over there, pastor. Good-by."

The other letters gave instructions for notifying friends and directed which undertaker was to be called.

Fire Company Summoned to Extinguish Saneel

Tulsa, Okla.—This story proves the brilliance of Oklahoma sunsets. An apartment-house resident at Tulsa rushed out of the building and sounded a fire alarm. Women hurried from a beauty parlor on the ground floor as the fire companies arrived.

Firemen thronged into the building. On the top floor a bright glare was visible through a crack. Hooks and axes ripped the boards away. Then the firemen found that the light was the setting sun flickering through lattice-work of a gable.

Man's Suicide to Scare Wife Proves Fatal to Self

Chicago.—His wife had fish for supper, but he desired an oyster stew. So John Fudala, thirty-three, loaded his gun with blank shells and, to scare his wife, pressed the gun to his head and pulled the trigger. He fell dead. The force of the powder, fired at close range, drove the paper pellet of one shell into the man's brain.

Convicted Through Dream

Re-acting in dream has led to the death sentence being pronounced on a Dumdorf (Germany) laborer. The condemned man fired two revolver shots at his victim, and as the man was still living he killed him by beating him on the head. He then threw the body into the Rhine. The prisoner in March of last year was arrested for a petty offense and thrown into jail with another man. While asleep in his cell in the night his companion heard him say in a dream: "At first I discharged my revolver at him, but as the fool struggled to rise to his feet I knocked him down and stepped on his head. This time he was dead, and I picked him up and threw his body into the Rhine." The facts were reported by the second prisoner, and the following day Schramm was formally accused of the murder. The body of the dead man was recovered, and revealed that death was caused as described by the prisoner in his night vision.

Where Is the Race Going?

A Beloit college expedition is being fitted out for the purpose of tracing the origin of man. It is believed the expedition will find the beginnings of the race in northern Africa. When it is known where the race came from will someone please fit out an expedition that will find out where the race is going?—Kansas City Star.

Indian Princess Lays Claim to 'Whole State'

Indian Princess Lays Claim to 'Whole State'

Mrs. Roberta Lawson, prominent member of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, is an Indian princess, the last surviving granddaughter of the chief of the Delaware, and through that descent claims ownership of the tribal lands which now compose Delaware. Mrs. Lawson is vice chairman of the division of Indian welfare of the federation.

Indians Are Efficient in Handling of Tools

Bismarck, N. D.—Innate ability with machinery and tools may eventually lead the American Indian to a new place in the sun, believes Clark B. Dickinson, head of the government Indian School for Girls here.

During his ten years in the Indian service, Dickinson says, he has found that the Indian has an ingenuity and an ability with tools which most white men would envy. This is the result, he thinks, of long centuries in which the Indian was compelled to devise tools to meet his peculiar conditions.

Indian boys make excellent automobile mechanics, he declares, and many have displayed proficiency in other trades where steadiness of hand and accuracy of eye are assets.

Arctic Not So Cold as Painted, Says Stefansson

Omaha, Neb.—The generally accepted theory that frigid weather is prevalent the year round in the Arctic regions was discounted by Vilhjalmur Stefansson, noted polar explorer and scientist, in an address here. Stefansson declared he had discovered by experience that the average temperature of Iceland in January is 30 degrees above zero and that on the northern coast of North America during July and August the thermometer very often goes to 80 degrees in the shade and has been known to go to 100 degrees.

Decorative Combs Lend Formal Note

Styles Vary With Prevailing
Modes; Much Depends on Coiffure.

Whether or not you agree that a woman's hair is her crowning glory, you probably will admit the beauty of an exquisite comb. In these days of shortened locks, combs are not as common as formerly in the feminine toilette. However, a great many still are being used.

In earliest civilization, women saw that a comb could ornament the hair as well as hold it in place. Egyptian ladies, while the Roman women plaited and crimped their hair with handsome ornamented combs. In Spain and Mexico the comb still holds away as the most elaborate of feminine ornaments.

There are all sorts of combs—back-combs, side-combs, ornamental hairpins, bandeaux and barrettes. Styles of combs vary with the prevailing fashions, and much depends upon lady's coiffure. If you dress your hair high, you can use a Spanish backcomb to advantage to form an ornamental background. For evening wear bandeaux and barrettes still are in high fashion. These combs are made in many shapes and sizes, and are ornamented at times with gold, silver, enamel, precious stones and imitation stones.

The actual comb may be made of hard rubber, celluloid, tortoise shell, amber, jet, silver, silverite. Throughout the European capitals the most exclusive shops display beautiful tortoise shell combs. If you have an old family heirloom of tortoise shell, get it out; it's quite the thing. Amber combs are very effective for golden hair, because they bring out the beautiful tint. Jet, a form of dense coal, also called black amber, is very effective.

While tortoise shell is a handsome material for combs, some women find it undesirable because it is very stiff and hard on sensitive heads. Amber is more pliant. Jet is a favorite when silver filigree work is to be added. For practical purposes of combing and waving, rubber combs probably are best. They have been made so that they are now almost indestructible.

The cheaper combs are cut by machinery from stamped dies. The better combs are fashioned by hand, and some of them have beautiful carving at the top. Celluloid combs are pressed to resemble carved ones of better materials. Gold, rhinestone, silver filigree and enamel are among the popular decorations for combs. Rhinestones and cut steel make attractive decorations for dark hair because of their brilliancy.

A fancy comb always should be selected to suit your individual beauty. Just now some lovely enormous ones of Spanish origin are worn with peacock tails.

Chic Sports Costume Is in Spun Silk and Kasha

Showing a charming sports costume in spun silk and kasha, one of the latest combinations in southern resort wear, and which promises to be in the limelight the coming spring.

Washed Godets Achieve Flare

Apparently there is no hard and fast rule applying to the exact position of the flare. It may take its position directly in the front of the skirt, it may appear at both sides or only one, and it may even be placed at the corner of the back, suggesting the resemblance of the days of the 18th century.

Big Hats

The large hats will not be overdone during the winter resort season. Indeed, they are of such size that it is impossible to overlook them. The variety of their brims, but most of them have been designed in solid.

Tip

"Attention to a wonderful thing," said a lady from New York. "I've what makes me think of the 'great tip' on a horse is entitled to as much thanks as the horse itself."—Washington.

Light Silks Are Worn at Resorts—for Spring

Light silks are being worn at the southern resorts this season, and are making a bid for spring favor. These charming outfits are of bright colors. This American print reflects the general atmosphere in resort fashions.

Dyed Furs Worn With

Green, Red and Purple

In recent seasons, when black, brown and gray provided the color chart from which most street apparel was chosen, there was little difficulty in uniting fur and fabric. Later, when the bright shades crowded natural tones into the background, it was taken for granted that fur had no choice but to contrast with the material. Now, however, the use of dyed pelts, colored in any shade, permits this form of trimming to enter actively into the color scheme. Flat fur like mole and cone are best adapted to the new treatment. Their silky, close-plied hair appears to advantage in the greens, reds and purples prominent among new colorings.

Colored fur trimmings are being especially fostered for southern resort wear, and are in evidence in current sports developments, generally blending with tweed or novelty worsteds. One three-quarter coat designed for the South is of a warm brown and gold-washed cloth in a pattern suggesting darned embroidery. A collar of deep yellow mole accents the bright tone of the material. Another coat: full length and very slightly flared, is made of orange-colored Leda cloth, with a wide panel of matching mole, finished at the neck with an unusual little turnover of the cloth. The same "Leda" of soft cashmere velours in mulberry color, is trimmed with a long stole collar and deep gauntlet cuffs of purple mole.

Interesting Trimmings

for New Winter Apparel

Among the various revivals of old-fashioned trimmings is ball fringe, which has been a stranger for a long time in the world of fashion. With the popularity of the bolero in frocks for young girls the fringe, adds a touch that is very pleasing.

Another style of trimming that adds an unusual feature to the frocks of flannel and jersey is the crochet chain stitch, in cotton, silk or wool as desired. The chain can be used in design, being sewed to heavy background and made in solid effects. Leaves can be put in floral designs by using green cotton, and when a bright touch is wanted colored beads can be introduced into the pattern.

Odd effects are shown in the new French frocks, among them dresses of rich velvet, combined with sheer georgette and edged in bands of fur. Colored embroideries have established themselves very firmly in the season's preferred trimmings, many shades being interwoven in one design, with thread to give an especially desirable touch of brightness. The head of fur is among the season's most persistent fads, being used in every kind of skin as an edge for both coats and frocks. For the cloth dresses there are many suggestions for trimming in leather, and for all wear much handwork is seen in the way of unique applique.

Sensational Sports Wear

While the French couturiers feature velvet to a marked degree in their winter collections for their more elaborate afternoon and evening modes, velvetons also plays a prominent part in sports attire. It is used for the smart box jacket which so often accompanies frocks of tweed, kasha or velours.

Various artificial silk velvet, or rayon velvet, as they are frequently called, are also shown. One of these velvetons is so light of weight and supple that it can be held in accordion pleats just as though it was a thin crepe or silk. This artificial silk velvet has a most delightful luster.

Fable

Once upon a time there was an actor who not only realized that his histrionic abilities were thoroughly limited, but showing appreciation for the fact, his salary was accordingly too high.

Would Abolish Boxing Judges

Albany, N. Y., Feb. 16.—A bill which would abolish judges in boxing bouts and substitute referees as the official making the decision will be introduced shortly by Assemblyman Kennedy, Democrat, of Queens.

The bill will provide that local health officials, instead of the state boxing commission, shall decide whether or not fight fans may smoke.

while a bout is in progress.

Assemblyman Kennedy says that the judges are the causes of much dissatisfaction because of their decisions.

"Many of them are high-brow politicians who are not qualified for the game in which they play so important a part," declared the Queens county assemblyman today.

THE STORY OF MUSSOLINI.

As the history of Europe during the next twenty years is pretty widely believed to depend on Mussolini, the "strongest man," the account of him in the biography written by Margherita Sarfatti, now receiving lengthy notice in American reviews, is of no small interest. According to his biographer, this son of a radical blacksmith was a "very naughty little boy," the details given showing that he was even more, for one he demolished "with a rock" a small enemy who had struck him only with bare fists. His passions and determination to have his will often got him into trouble later, the record showing "eleven fall terms" to his credit. While satisfying his wanderlust he read widely and "mastered" half a dozen languages. Service in the World War developed him further. His organizing genius finally put him at the head of the Fascist, and after the success of his party in 1922 "his troops seized Rome and wrung absolute political power from a feeble parliament and a bewildered king." There is something like a hint of an understanding between him and the Vatican. For while his Fascist forces held Milan the present Pope was Archbishop there and emphasis is placed on the fact that since then Mussolini has restored religion to the public schools.

The story of this man's boyhood, early manhood and early political triumphs is strikingly different from that of great leaders of modern times of the George Washington type. The kind of admiration it excites partakes of fear. Mussolini appears to be more of the Napoleonic type, with something added that suggests the ruthless determination of ancient and barbaric conquerors. There would seem to be an element of atavism in the disturbing fact of 20th-century history which he personifies, and which the on-looking world may well take into account.

"LIFE" SENTENCES.

Life sentences no longer involve imprisonment for life as a rule. For those thus sentenced, no matter how heinous their crime, are likely to become eligible for parole after a period all too short as compared with the gravity of the offenses committed. In consequence long prison sentences have virtually lost their terrors and are not the deterrent aimed at by the law. In order to provide remedy for these disastrous conditions a bill before the New York legislature proposes to amend the penal code so as to make a life sentence one in fact as well as in name—a proposition approved by the committee on criminal courts law and procedure of the New York City Bar Association. This committee urges that a life sentence should be made what it pretends to be, except in the case of direct executive clemency, it not being proposed to take away a Governor's power to pardon or commute.

The exercise of executive clemency in rare cases is a vastly different thing from a parole system acting automatically in the case of all prisoners with wit enough to work for "good behavior" credit. The obvious danger is that the worst prisoners from the point of view of the public safety may be the most expert in playing the game, even at the cost of self-denial. The most intelligent prisoners are likely to be the most dangerous and these are the more capable of playing a part with a view to pretend a reform that has not even been begun and may never have a real beginning.

A German professor has written a book to prove that Germany lost the war because there was too much wine in America when the Germans broke through to that point in the spring of 1918. If they had come thirty from a "dry" homeland and been allowed no drink-rations, we might believe that they gazed discomfitedly at Americans, but under the known circumstances, this is obviously but a feeble effort to misplace the blame.

It is known that the rulers of Turkey have been forcing modern customs and fashions into that country with hydrogen-like methods, but it is rather credulously somewhat to read the news from Constantinople that six Turks have been executed and fourteen others have been imprisoned for long terms for refusing to wear hats in lieu of the fez of their fathers.

The 200th anniversary of the purchase of Manhattan Island from the Indians for $24 will be celebrated this year. It might require a powerful microscope to discover a place of the island that could be purchased for $24 now.

WHY A HEART SOCIETY?

As most cases of organic heart disease are due to infection, and this infection leaves the heart damaged to some extent, you naturally ask the question as to what help can be given by these heart societies now being formed in different parts of the country.

Suppose you have had rheumatic infection which affected your heart. You get better and go about your work all right, but you know that you have an organic heart ailment, and the insurance companies will not take a chance on you.

You might begin to worry about your heart, become depressed in spirits, lose your appetite, and be afraid to take any exercise whatever. Your whole manner of life is directed under this handicap.

The idea of the heart society is to give you the information that despite this organic condition, your chances of living and enjoying life are as good as that of the man with the normal heart.

With this hope in your heart you consult your family physician, and he outlines to you the two or three simple methods of preserving the strength of your heart muscle. This will mean light daily exercise, such as walking, plain wholesome food, cutting down on stimulants, and the correction of any condition that might cause another attack, such as bad teeth or constipation, and so forth.

Another point also is that there are a number of folks who have the secret notion that there is something wrong with their heart. They avoid their family doctor, or else get the notion that he does not like to tell them the truth about it. The heart society advises always that he see his doctor and learn his exact condition.

There are others with a real organic ailment who haven't the slightest idea that they have it, and are going blithely on their way taking all kinds of chances in the way of work, food, indulgences of various kinds. The society will point out to such the true condition, and give the advice necessary.

And an individual with bad teeth, tonsils and other conditions may very readily develop an organic heart condition if these are not corrected. He is a real prospect for an organic heart condition. When this is explained to him he will likely be only too willing to have the condition corrected.

The value of the work of these heart societies in saving lives is therefore quite apparent.

England's Herring Hoax

The end of October sees the East Anglian autumn herring season in full swing. East Anglia—especially the Yarmouth district—has been a herring center for close on 1,500 years. Foreigners have bought East Anglian herrings from the days of the Vikings and Saxons. Seven weeks the Yarmouth herring season lasts, during which time something like 400,000 herrings are caught. Fortunately the herring breeds at an enormous rate, the mother laying about 10,000 eggs. So there is never a scarcity of fish each season. The herrings are cured and packed for export to places like Germany and Russia. Last year 14,000 barrels of cured herring were exported from East Anglian ports, twice as many as the year before. The export of cured gutted herrings reached altogether a total of 50,000 barrels.

New High Explosive

An explosive so violent that it does the pieces of its container shot-hole fashion clear through a heavy bottle without cracking the bottle was recently demonstrated, according to Science.

The new substance is distinct, a new product of remarkable new developments in explosive chemistry at the same time, however, as usual, does and explodes as well-known in this research, and a brilliant new colored color is one of the results of combining substances with similar properties. This is the first serious and successful use of acetylene in chemical explosives, the gas having heretofore been relegated to the domain of the street welder.

Today's Story in New York History

By Frederic A. Godcharles.

(Copyright, 1926, by the Author)

The Mohawk were the most celebrated of the Iroquois Confederacy, known as the Five Nations. They were the most easterly tribe of this confederation, their villages being in the valley of the Mohawk River, from the vicinity of Schenectady nearly to Utica, and their territory extended north to the St. Lawrence and south to the watershed of Schoharie Creek, and the east branch of the Susquehanna River.

From their position on the eastern frontier of the Iroquois Confederation the Mohawks were among the most prominent of the Iroquoian tribes in the early Indian wars and in the official negotiations with the colonies. Owing to their position they also suffered much more than their confederates in some of the Indian and French wars. The Confederacy being called the "long house," the Mohawks were denominated the "Eastern Door."

Toward the close of the sixteenth century the Algonquin tribes had reduced the Mohawk to a small number, and by the time the Dutch arrived in their country, they were at their lowest strength, numbering less than five hundred souls and dwelling in four or five wretched villages.

On July 30, 1609 Champlain and his followers, French and Indians from Canada encountered the Mohawks on the lake to which he gave his own name. This was the first time the Indians had fought against firearms, and they died in dismay.

The Dutch furnished the Mohawk with firearms, and this marked an important era in their history, for it enabled them to subjugate the Delaware and Munsee, and thus begin a career of conquest that carried their war parties to the Mississippi and to the shores of Hudson Bay.

The Mohawk made frequent incursions into Canada and were hostile toward the French. Finally, in 1661, M. de Tracy, French Viceroy of New France, although over seventy years of age, led a military expedition against the Mohawk. In this extraordinary expedition M. de Tracy was accompanied by M. de Courcelles, governor of Canada.

A regiment, recently arrived from France, twenty-eight companies of foot, and all the militia of Quebec, marched seven hundred miles into the Mohawk country in the dead of winter.

The Mohawks, on the approach of the French, retired deeper into the forest with their women and children, and all the invaders accomplished was to burn several villages and murder some sachems.

Then the treacherous Mohawk courted with the French a long time offering friendship, then attacking them, until early in 1667, when the exasperated Canadians resolved to chastise them for their perfidy.

Tracy and de Courcelles, at the head of twelve hundred soldiers and one hundred Indian allies, set out December 29, 1666, passed down Lake Champlain in boats and canoes to take revenge for the murder of several French subjects. The army crossed swamps and streams on bridges of ice, and burrowed in the snow at night.

The French supposed they had arrived before the Mohawk villages on February 9, but the guides had misled them to within about two miles of Schenectady, or three days' march from their destination.

The French were suddenly attacked by the Mohawk, who drew them into an ambush. At the first fire eleven French, including the lieutenant in command were slain. Dispatches were sent to Albany, and the governor of Canada was asked his reasons for leading so formidable a body of armed men into the English province.

The governor replied that he sought to destroy the Mohawk, but not to molest any English subjects, and asked that his wounded be cared for in Albany. The emissaries consented but the French were nearly starved, and so frightened by the Mohawk attack that a panic ensued and on February 12 de Courcelles ordered a retreat, which was made just in time to escape pursuit by the wily Mohawk.

The French sent another expedition against the Mohawk later in that year, and attempted to win the savings to the French interest but the English persuaded them to remain faithful.

Count Frontenac, Governor of Canada, being unable to effect a treaty with them, led an expedition to the Mohawk country, arriving in February, 1673, and captured two villages, but suffered a loss of thirty troops when attacking the third village.

On February 16, when Colonel Peter Schuyler rushed to the aid of the Mohawk he recaptured many of those taken prisoner by the French, and prevented the Mohawk from making a treaty of peace with the French.

Tomorrow—Perry ordered to Sachett's Harbor.

THE STORY OF MUSSOLINI.

As the history of Europe during the past twenty years is pretty widely believed to depend on Mussolini, his "strongest man," the account of him in the biography written by Margherita Sarfatti, now receiving lengthy notice in American reviews, is of no small interest. According to his biographer, this son of a radical blacksmith was a "very naughty little boy," the details given showing that he was even more, for one he demolished "with a rock" a small enemy who had struck him only with bare fists. His passions and determination to have his will often got him into trouble later, the record showing "eleven fail terms" to his credit. While satisfying his wanderlust he read widely and "mastered" half a dozen languages. Service in the World War developed him further. His organizing genius finally put him at the head of the Fascists, and after the success of his party in 1922 "his troops seized Rome and wrung absolute political power from a feeble parliament and a bewildered King." There is something like a hint of an understanding between him and the Vatican. For while his Fascist forces held Milan the present Pope was Archbishop there and emphasis is placed on the fact that since then Mussolini has restored religion to the public schools.

The story of this man's boyhood, early manhood and early political triumphs is strikingly different from that of great leaders of modern times of the George Washington type. The kind of admiration it excites partakes of fear. Mussolini appears to be more of the Napoleonic type, with something added that suggests the ruthless determination of ancient and barbaric conquerors. There would seem to be an element of atavism in the disturbing fact of 20th-century history which he personifies, and which the on-looking world may well take into account.

"LIFE" SENTENCES.

Life sentences no longer involve imprisonment for life as a rule, for those thus sentenced, no matter how heinous their crime, are likely to become eligible for parole after a period all too short as compared with the gravity of the offenses committed. In consequence long prison sentences have virtually lost their terrors and are not the deterrent aimed at by the law. In order to provide remedy for these disastrous conditions a bill before the New York legislature proposes to amend the penal code so as to make a life sentence one in fact as well as in name—a proposition approved by the committee on criminal courts law and procedure of the New York City Bar Association. This committee urges that a life sentence should be made what it pretends to be, except in the case of direct executive clemency. It is not being proposed to take away a Governor's power to pardon or commute.

The exercise of executive clemency in rare cases is a vastly different thing from a parole system acting automatically in the case of all prisoners with wit enough to work for "good behavior" credit. The obvious danger is that the worst prisoners from the point of view of the public safety may be the most expert in playing the game, even at the cost of self-defense. The most intelligent prisoners are likely to be the most dangerous and these are the more capable of playing a part with a view to pretend a reform that has not even been begun and may never have a real beginning.

A German professor has written a book to prove that Germany lost the war because there was too much wine in America when the Germans broke through to that point in the spring of 1918. If they had come directly from a "dry" homeland and been allowed no drink-rations, we might believe that they puzzled disastrously in America, but under the known circumstances, this is obviously but a feeble effort to mislead the home.

WHY A HEART SOCIETY?

As most cases of organic heart disease are due to infection, and this infection leaves the heart damaged to some extent, you naturally ask the question as to what help can be given by these heart societies now being formed in different parts of the country.

Suppose you have had rheumatic infection which affected your heart. You get better and go about your work all right, but you know that you have an organic heart ailment, and the insurance companies will not take a chance on you.

You might begin to worry about your heart, become depressed in spirits, lose your appetite, and be afraid to take any exercise whatever. Your whole manner of life is directed under this handicap.

The idea of the heart society is to give you the information that despite this organic condition, your chances of living and enjoying life are as good as that of the man with the normal heart.

With this hope in your heart you consult your family physician, and he outlines to you the two or three simple methods of preserving the strength of your heart muscle. This will mean light daily exercise, such as walking, plain wholesome food, cutting down on stimulants, and the correction of any condition that might cause another attack, such as bad teeth or tonsils, constipation, and so forth.

Another point also is that there are a number of folks who have the secret notion that there is something wrong with their heart. They avoid their family doctor, or else get the notion that he does not like to tell them the truth about it. The heart society advises always that he see his doctor and learn his exact condition.

There are others with a real organic ailment who haven't the slightest idea that they have it, and are going blithely on their way taking all kinds of chances in the way of work, food, indulgence of various kinds. The society will point out to such the true condition, and give the advice necessary.

And an individual with bad teeth, tonsils and other conditions may very readily develop an organic heart condition if these are not corrected. He is a real prospect for an organic heart condition. When this is explained to him he will likely be only too willing to have the condition corrected.

The value of the work of these heart societies in saving lives is therefore quite apparent.

England's Herring Haul

The end of October sees the East Anglian autumn herring season in full swing. East Anglia—especially the Farnmouth district—has been a herring center for close on 1,500 years. Foreigners have bought East Anglian herrings from the days of the Vikings and Saxons. Seven weeks the Farnmouth herring season lasts, during which time something like sixteen hundred tons of herring are caught. Fortunately the herring breeds at an enormous rate, the mother laying about 200,000 eggs, so there is never a scarcity of fish each season. The herring are cured and packed for export to places like Germany and Russia. Last year 50,000 barrels of cured herring were exported from East Anglian ports, twice as many as the year before. The export of cured gutted herring reached altogether a total of 50,000 barrels.

New High Explosive

An explosive so violent that it does the place of its container shot through a brick wall through a heavy bottle without cracking the bottle was recently demonstrated, according to Science.

The new substance is a distillate from a product of remarkable new decomposition in aqueous chemistry at State Normal University. As usual, gun and explosives are bedfellows in this research, and a brilliant new color is one of the results of combining selenium with smaller quantities. This is the first serious and extensive use of selenium in chemical synthesis, the gas having heretofore been relegated to the domain of the steel worker.

By Frederic A. Godcharles.

(Copyright, 1936, by the Author)

The Mohawk were the most celebrated of the Iroquois Confederacy, known as the Five Nations. They were the most easterly tribe of this confederation, their villages being in the valley of the Mohawk River, from the vicinity of Schenectady nearly to Utica, and their territory extended north to the St. Lawrence and south to the watershed of Schoharie Creek, and the east branch of the Susquehanna River.

From their position on the eastern frontier of the Iroquois Confederacy the Mohawk were among the most prominent of the Iroquois tribes in the early Indian wars and in the official negotiations with the colonies. Owing to their position they also suffered much more than their confederates in some of the Indian and French wars. The Confederacy being called the "long house," the Mohawk were denominated the "Eastern Door."

Toward the close of the sixteenth century the Algonkin tribes had reduced the Mohawk to a small number, and by the time the Dutch arrived in their country, they were at their lowest strength, numbering less than five hundred souls and dwelling in four or five wretched villages.

On July 30, 1609 Champlain and his followers, French and Indians from Canada encountered the Mohawk on the lake to which he gave his own name. This was the first time the Indians had fought against firearms, and they fled in dismay.

The Dutch furnished the Mohawk with firearms, and this marked an important era in their history, for it enabled them and their cognate Iroquois tribes to subjugate the Delaware and Munsee, and thus begin a career of conquest that carried their war parties to the Mississippi and to the shores of Hudson Bay.

The Mohawk made frequent incursions into Canada and were hostile toward the French. Finally, in 1661, M. de Tracy, French Viceroy of New France, although over seventy years of age, led a military expedition against the Mohawk. In this extraordinary expedition M. de Tracy was accompanied by M. de Courcelles, governor of Canada.

A regiment, recently arrived from France, twenty-eight companies of foot, and all the militia of Quebec, marched seven hundred miles into the Mohawk country in the dead of winter.

The Mohawk, on the approach of the French, retired deeper into the forest with their women and children, and all the invaders accomplished was to burn several villages and murder some sachems.

Then the treacherous Mohawk courted with the French a long time offering friendship, then attacking them, until early in 1667, when the exasperated Canadians resolved to chastise them for their perfidy.

Tracy and de Courcelles, at the head of twelve hundred soldiers and one hundred Indian allies, set out December 23, 1666, passed down Lake Champlain in boats and canoes to take revenge for the murder of several French subjects. The army crossed swamps and streams on bridges of ice, and burrowed in the snow at night.

The French supposed they had arrived before the Mohawk villages on February 9, but the guides had misled them to within about two miles of Schenectady, or three days' march from their destination.

The French were suddenly attacked by the Mohawk, who drew them into an ambush. At the first fire eleven French, including the lieutenant in command were slain. Dispatches were sent to Albany, and the governor of Canada was asked his reasons for leading so formidable a body of armed men into the English province.

The governor replied that he sought to destroy the Mohawk, but not to molest any English subjects, and asked that his wounded be cared for in Albany. The emissaries consented but the French were nearly starved, and so frightened by the Mohawk attack that a panic ensued and on February 12 de Courcelles ordered a retreat, which was made just in time to escape pursuit by the wily Mohawk.

The French sent another expedition against the Mohawk later in that year, and attempted to win the savings to the French interest but the English persuaded them to remain faithful.

Count Frontenac, Governor of Canada, being unable to effect a treaty with them, led an expedition to the Mohawk country, arriving in February, 1682, and captured two villages, but suffered a loss of thirty troops when attacking the third village.

On February 16, when Colonel Peter Schuyler rushed to the aid of the Mohawk he recaptured many of those taken prisoner by the French, and prevented the Mohawk from making a treaty of the peace with the French.

POULTRY FACTS

LIGHT AND FRESH
AIR FOR POULTRY

Hens are on a strike. Colds, roup and frozen combs, the greatest food bin robbers and profit side-trackers of the poultryman are chiefly responsible, say Kansas State Agricultural college poultrymen. Comfort for the flock means dryness more than it means warmth. The hen is a high speed motor and in breathing throws off a vast amount of moisture. The solution is to leave at least one-third of the south side open, with no glass or glass substitute present to interfere with the free passage of fresh air or the direct sun rays, the college poultrymen advise.

"Poultry must have an abundance of fresh air and light. One of the simplest and least expensive methods of securing it is by means of the open-front principle," says W. G. Ward, the college extension architect.

"Openings should be provided in the upper part of the south wall, with an area equal to one-tenth of the floor space. If the house is reasonably deep no glass will be needed in these openings but muslin frames should be provided to protect the flock from draft during severe storms. In houses already built with many windows, the upper sash should be replaced with muslin frames which should remain open most of the time.

"In buildings inadequately lighted, the present small windows may be removed and the openings enlarged. Poultry will thrive in relatively low temperatures providing they are dry and free from drafts."

The poultry house also must have ample space to give best results, Ward says. From three to four square feet of floor area and from seven to ten inches of roosts should be provided for each hen, the larger figures applying to the heavier breeds. Too many poultry houses are overcrowded, and in many cases it will be found profitable to decrease the flock size, if it is not possible to increase housing facilities.

Good Stock Kept Warm Essential in Brooding

Chicks from stock of good quality, and a warm brooder are two essentials of successful brooding. In the opinion of specialists at the New Jersey State college poultry department, High feed prices, they contend, can be offset only by heavy layers, and such birds can be produced only from vigorous chicks. Experienced poultrymen maintain a brooder temperature of 95 to 100 degrees. At this temperature the chicks will arrange themselves around the edge of the brooder, perhaps not evenly, but at least in a few groups, and when so located one can feel reasonably sure that his flock is being properly heated.

As the birds become older they can move away from the heat if they so desire. If the heat is removed from them, however, they will crowd in close to the stove or in the corner in an effort to get warm.

In addition to plenty of heat, have a temporary wire fence, of three-fourths-inch mesh and eighteen inches high, stretched around the chicks for the first few days. After the third day, gradually open out this fence until the chicks have the run of the house. When entirely opened, however, the fence should still be rounded at the corners and should be three or four inches from the sides of the house. In case the chicks have a tendency to crowd to one side they will not be crowding against a solid partition. There will be an air space back of the flock, so that no serious results should follow.

Profit and Loss

Calculate the profit or loss on the past year's work with poultry. Outline the program for next year. Make a number of good resolutions to improve the weak points in the past year's program. Poultry will pay good dividends on the investment in proportion to the careful planning and wise management used in caring for it.

Poultry Hints

Firm, smooth eggshells are made with plenty of eggshell and grit.

This is a good time to repair the hen house and provide comfortable quarters for the flock.

The only way to give them a good start, and to insure a heavy lay, is to give them the benefits of a clean house, free from insects, pests, and free from disease.

Cleanliness is one of the most important problems confronting poultry stock owners.

Straw costs money in some parts of the country, but bear in mind the distinction between a hen house and a dairy barn.

Clean eggs, packed in bright, new cases will bring top prices. A short fastening period pays on all eggs to be marketed. A separate pen with moist mulch and grain before them at all times means quick marketing.

Yet, it's just as dangerous to children's health to allow them to suffer "indoor exposure" — one room too hot, another too cold.

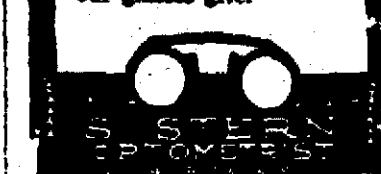

Protect them, inside the home as well as outdoors. Install a radiator heating plant, to keep every room evenly warm.

Our experience can be used to profitable advantage by you in planning modern home heating.

Nutty Natural History
By HUGH HUTTON.

The above illustration shows one of the most interesting and at the same time rare birds of North America. Individuals have been reported in northern New York and Ontario, where they are usually seen perched on mahogany trees drilling 'round and 'round with their heads for boll weevils. A day's drilling of this sort will wind up their necks considerably, so at sundown they jump in the air to unwind, which they do by holding the head stationary and rapidly revolving the body. The loud whirling noise of the spinning whampus is often mistaken for a swarm of bees.

A good-sized needle fastened to a fibert head forms the chief working implement of this bird. A large filbert acts for the body. The feet are split almonds, the legs tooth-picks, and claws are used for the tail and neck.

C. of C. Holds Annual Dinner

Last year when through inquiry prices for buying wild-cat stocks, bonds and other investments the losses of local investors had been cut down from something like $150,000 to some $30,000. He warned those present of two local stock and bond salesmen and urged an investigation prior to purchase.

Florida Heads List

Defective Talks About Speculation. William H. Barbour, assistant manager of the Investors' protective department of the William J. Burns International Detective Agency, Inc., was the speaker of the evening. He said in part:

"Topping the list of current predictions are the many Florida real estate offerings. I have no argument with the man who desires and can afford to speculate in Florida real estate or desires to build a winter home there, and would not, even if I desired, attempt to sway him from his views. But perhaps I can appeal to those who really cannot afford to either speculate or spend the winter in the south, through your Chamber of Commerce and the local newspapers."

"Ninety per cent of the people of America are dependent upon annual incomes ranging from $2,000 downward. Obviously no extended argument is necessary to point out that the head of a family cannot afford to take a mid-winter vacation on such an income. But it is a fact that many of the land offerings are directed toward these same heads of families. Consequently, they are buying not with any more than a fond hope that some day they may go down there, but for the present they are buying purely for speculative or gambling purposes. Hence a very large number of Florida sales are made on this basis.

"Kingston is a community of homes and business. The homes are built around industry. This community started in a small way and as its industrial life grew, so also did the number of homes grow and property values consequently enhanced in value. The same is true of the vast majority of our American communities. For example: Troy has grown largely around the laundry machinery business; New Britain, Conn., around the hardware industry; Lynn, Mass., around shoes; Attleboro, Mass., around manufactures; Pittsburgh around the steel industry; Gloversville around the glove industry; Schenectady around electrical equipment; the cities and towns of the anthracite region of Pennsylvania have built upon the hard coal industry. And so on along the line. Of course, there are many communities solely residential, but for the most part the restrictions are such that many of average income cannot afford to live in such communities, attractive though they be. The prosperity of the cities I have mentioned has continued through the decades. They have prospered continuously excepting for short periods of particular or general business depression; prospered because they have depended upon their industrial life. Prosperity due to real estate speculation and not a cause.

Speculative Basis Not Industrial.

"Whereas in the main in Florida the prosperity to date has largely been built upon real estate speculation and not industrial. Please do not misunderstand me. I know that Florida has a remarkable climate. I realize full well that many hundreds of millions of dollars have been spent in development work during the past few years. The results of these expenditures have worked marvelous beauties of the handiwork of man by taking advantage of the handiwork of the Creator.

"We are told that industrial life is to follow. No doubt it will—at least in certain sections of Florida. But how successful will it be? It is to prove in its entirely speculative, when we remove from the picture the glowing expectations and glittering promises of the publicity experts. You can't beat the old law of supply and demand; the laws of compensation must eventually obtain. The peak must come. It is not likely to occur at the same time throughout the state. But some day it will come; just when nobody knows. And when it does somebody will be holding the bag and just how full or empty it is going to be is largely a gamble.

"When buying Florida real estate, or for that matter real estate anywhere it is well to consult the property before buying. Then, too, it is advisable to first make certain that the company offering it is legitimate and responsible; that the title is clear and then, too, check up on the prices asked as compared with prices for similarly situated properties.

"I do not wish to convey the impression that all Florida land or real estate is dangerous. There are a number of thoroughly respectable concerns developing large tracts. But such previous fore exceptions their offerings are not for the man of small means. And he is told to the credit of these responsible companies they are not offering their land to wage earners.

Florida Is Premier's Frontier. Florida is today the premier playground. Following in the trail of such development as Joseph W. Young was in creating Hollywood, by the late George M. Cohan, who is responsible for Coral Gables and the Sun Beach development and a few others, within a long train of questionable or highly speculative offerings. The danger of every better shop, generally speaking, which has been opened in our large cities during the past few years, is in Florida, today, in the company of the highest pressure stock salesman. The gullibility of most big business men is being tested in Florida.

at $150, near La Belle. He calls this a poor man's opportunity. All that is necessary is to pay for the land and nature will provide you with four crops a year. He loses sight of the necessity of working capital to build your home, stock your farm, clear the land, plant and cultivate, and most important of all, market successfully. Catehill and Schoharie county people have contracted to buy tracts aggregating $200,000. Practically all of them wage earners. He felt offended when I told him I would not sell his lands for him if I lived in Gloversville and hoped to continue to live there.

"One of the latest Florida land stunts is that played by a company calling itself the Lee Development and Construction Company and claiming to have an office at 305 Broadway, New York. We have not been able to locate it at that address, however. It is circulating stockholders in the Bulletin Proof and Non Shatterable Glass Corporation and Armour Plate Glass Corporation offering to take stock on their hands at par value. If you check up in any of the newspapers you will find that the company does not have its address at the office claimed, salesmen will tell you a former large stockholder in each company has recouped his losses in Florida lands and now seized with an attack of Scotch conscience would like to see the same good fortune come your way. Hence the offer. The story related by the Griffin Construction and Development Company is identical except that it is addressed to stockholders in the Banks Oil Company and the Midland Oil Corporation. The Griffin Company does have an office at 305 Broadway. The principal is none other than 'Charley' Greenhaus, the 'Boy Wizard of Wall Street' who is awaiting trial on two indictments for grand larceny returned by the Suffolk county grand jury.

Still Bites on Oil Wells.

"Generally speaking, people have become rather chary of oil wells, but the public is still biting. The latest oil field of size to be developed is the Fort Collins in northeastern Colorado. Geologists appear to agree on the quality of the oil being as fine as Pennsylvania crude. They also believe that the wells are going to prove as long lived as the oil city, Pa., field and some of the first wells driven are still pumping. But we should be careful of Fort Collins promotion for the reason that the Standard Oil of Indiana and the Union Oil of California own or lease every bit of the Fort Collins structure which geologists believe has oil. Consequently any other companies offering shares in this field are out and out wild cats.

"As in the case of the Fort Collins oil structure, I have recently been through the Colorado mining regions. Just now offerings are being made in the east by Colorado mining consolidations. Consolidations are quite the order of the day. But out investigations show and authorities appear to agree with us, anything promising do not have to go outside of Denver and Colorado Springs for their financing."

Mr. Barbour also warned against the Central Copper Company which is still selling lapsed shares in New York state, although there has never been any production during its seven years of existence and but very little for a few months by its predecessor company, the Mascot Copper Company, although it first started to sell stock in 1907. These two promotions have taken in twenty-three million dollars.

The sale of Ford Motor Company of Canada Bankers Shares was also criticized. All of the companies of New York state a year under the Martin Act, the Supreme court holding the sale of these fractional shares to be fraudulent. The promoters moved over to New Jersey and are flooding the malls. These shares are being sold at prices far in excess of their market value. They have been repudiated by Mr. Ford.

Kingston Contributed $150,000. In closing, Mr. Barbour paid a tribute to the work that has been accomplished in Kingston by the Chamber of Commerce during the past year. Whereas in 1924 this community lined promoters' promises to the tune of better than $150,000, the losses, due to constant vigilance, during 1925 amounted to less than a quarter of that. He said that none of this would have been lost had the public inquired first. This is a service that is free to the people of Kingston and its value is contained in the fact that the Burns Agency investigates without fear or favor at the source, analyzes and rates. It is the only organization serving Chamber of Commerce in local and unincorporated areas as do Poor's and Moody's serve the banks in listed stocks.

Mr. Barbour emphasized the importance of the rate: ten per cent for speculation and twenty per cent for investment; but always learn the facts at the Chamber of Commerce before investing.

At the conclusion of Mr. Barbour's talk Solomon Abramowitz of this city was introduced and spoke of the possibilities of Kingston. In the five years he has resided here, he said he had noticed a marked change in the city. The new Governor Clinton Hotel which was nearing completion would be a great attraction to the city. Many people would stop here and see the advantage of Kingston. What the city needed was more industry, not necessarily large ones, and he predicted an industrial growth in the future.

He was furnished throughout the evening of the dinner by Malcom's orchestra and community singing was indulged in under the direction of Harry Weissbrod.

Substantial Activities. The following report on industrial activities was read by Secretary Louis S. Coe:

Before going into the subject of industrial activities for our city, we wish to bring to your attention a list of products that are now manufactured in Kingston. One thing that tends to make a healthy city is diversified manufacturing. Many cities are built around one large industry, when running in capacity to which but on the other hand if business is dull, the city is immediately plunged into a period of depression.

depression felt in all departments of the city life. Kingston is fortunate in not being dependent on any one factory or industry.

A list of articles manufactured in Kingston is, in part, as follows:

Awlknives, Flares and Tents—H. C. Johnston.
Barrels—Kingston Cooperage Co.

Shk—Kattermann & Mitchell Co., Waists—Jacob Kreppel.
Household and Kitchen Utensils—W. G. Brown Mfg. Co.

From this list you can readily see that one of the reasons for Kingston's prosperity might well be designated as its diversified productions.

The Chamber of Commerce has not been successful in bringing to Kingston new industries this year, but in this connection we wish you to realize that three industries that are here are due to the work of the chamber and have paid in wages to employes the sum of $1,807,422.00 since they have been established here.

Perhaps the best work we can point to this year in the industrial field is our efforts in making it possible for a business already established here to expand. This company, with the completion of their new building, will employ from 50 to 75 additional men. We believe that this is even better than bringing in a new industry for we know this firm and have watched with pleasure its growth since it came to our city.

Much time has been given by our officers and others in endeavoring to bring to our city new firms. Especially have we tried to bring those employing male labor.

The fact that industry is so necessary to the financial life of the city as illustrated by the figures given a moment ago, is only another urge that we use our best efforts along this line of our work.

Industrial Growth in Kingston. Mention has already been made of one of our industrial plants which is planning to enlarge. It is a source of satisfaction to every citizen that two other plants, namely, F. Jacobson & Sons and the Manhattan Shirt Companies have this year built additions and that another industry brought here through the efforts of the Chamber is having plans prepared for a new addition to its already large plant. We refer to L. Barth & Company, Inc. This, we believe, is an extremely healthy growth and a true indication of progress in the industrial life of our city.

We would also call to your attention the splendid improvements made in many of our retail stores, which would indicate a healthy growth in the retail business.

The Governor Clinton. Each day brings nearer the completion of the new hotel. The hotel has been made possible by united community effort and is the biggest undertaking of the Chamber in recent years. We believe that we shall be able to point with pride to one of the best designed, best built and best managed hotels in the country. Much of the construction work has been given to local contractors and the furnishing is being done through local firms so that it has, indeed, been what was always intended to be a real community enterprise. The contractors that have been given to out of town people were only so placed because of the inability of the local firms to meet the outside competition.

Publicity. You will find at your place a copy of the Kingston pamphlet which was issued during the year. The expense incurred in printing this was borne by various members of the chamber. These pamphlets are being mailed out constantly in reply to requests for information regarding Kingston. With them we also mail a copy of the road map. Tourists find this map of great use and many requests for same are received in addition to this the chamber has placed advertisements in the New York World and the Knickerbocker Press.

Mention at this time should also be made regarding the publicity Kingston is already receiving because of the Governor Clinton Hotel. All of the literature issued by the United Hotels as well as that of the American Hotels carries mention of Kingston and the Governor Clinton Hotel. This literature is published in great volume and is sent from one end of the country to the other. It must always be borne in mind that with the opening of the hotel, due to this extended publicity, many will be attracted to our city. Out of this large number it is not unreasonable to suppose that some will be convinced that Kingston is a fine residential city which they would possibly like to make their home and following this argument a bit further, it is not more than possible that it might impress some as a city in which to locate the industry in which they are engaged.

Many calls for a map of the city caused us to have printed the folder enclosed with the Kingston pamphlet and it has proved a very popular form of publicity.

For use during the summer months, we issued this year, as has been done before, the Kingston Transportation Guide. These were placed at advantageous places throughout the city for distribution.

Investors Protective Service. This past year there has been at the disposal of the membership and all citizens of Kingston a free service that has been used to quite an extent. We refer to our contract with the W. J. Burns Detective Agency. Through them we have been able to furnish reports on all investment propositions. We have on file their report on four hundred or more companies they have investigated and we can obtain a detailed report on any one of these companies in twenty-four hours or a report on any company not listed within a very short time. You are to have the privilege tonight of hearing Mr. Barbour speak on the work that they are doing and we know you will find it interesting.

We may only add this—Investigate before buying.

St. John Forum of Fundamentals. St. John is the privilege of a city. The name of Kingston to have a teacher of such calibre come and give of his time and strength as did Arthur F. Shelden, who was here in the early fall. The influence of his teachings in school, factory and forum will be at work in our midst for a long, long time. The number in attendance at the forum meetings held in the High School Auditorium testified to the fact that citizens of Kingston and vicinity realized that they were sitting at the feet of a master teacher with a subject that was vital to every one.

Fire Prevention Week.

This year the chamber was glad to cooperate with the local fire department officials in staging a demonstration that would bring home to the people of our city the ever present necessity of carefulness in those things that bring about a decrease in the fire loss from year to year. You will recall that the day was a very rainy one and yet in spite of the rain a splendid showing was made in the parade planned. Chief Murphy's idea to show the progress made in fire fighting equipment was well carried out and was most interesting. Thanks are due to the city for making it possible to have music and to the volunteer companies for their splendid assistance. On the morning of this day, local firemen spoke in each of the schools bringing home the message of the hour to all those in attendance. Thanks are due those men and school authorities for their fine cooperation.

The B. Michael Townsend Dinner. No more pleasant event happened during the year than that of the traditional dinner tendered to our beloved superintendent of schools, Dr. Myron J. Michael. Out of fifty years given in the state, thirty years of unswerving service have been rendered to the youth of Kingston which well deserves our most praise and commendation. Our first held on here a place in the hearts of the people of our city as does Dr. Michael.

These County Farm Bureau and Chamber of Commerce Plans.

Each year the county farm bureau is giving a growing testimony to its value. The opportunity to meet in good fellowship and frantically friendly their friends here in Kingston is worth while to both.

has placed advertisements in the New York World and the Knickerbocker Press.

Mention at this time should also be made regarding the publicity Kingston is already receiving because of the Governor Clinton Hotel. All of the literature issued by the United Hotels as well as that of the American Hotels carries mention of Kingston and the Governor Clinton Hotel. This literature is published in great volume and is sent from one end of the country to the other. It must always be borne in mind that with the opening of the hotel, due to this extended publicity, many will be attracted to our city. Out of this large number it is not unreasonable to suppose that some will be convinced that Kingston is a fine residential city which they would possibly like to make their home and following this argument a bit further, it is not more than possible that it might impress some as a city in which to locate the industry in which they are engaged.

Many calls for a map of the city caused us to have printed the folder enclosed with the Kingston pamphlet and it has proved a very popular form of publicity.

For use during the summer months, we issued this year, as has been done before, the Kingston Transportation Guide. These were placed at advantageous places throughout the city for distribution.

Investors Protective Service. This past year there has been at the disposal of the membership and all citizens of Kingston a free service that has been used to quite an extent. We refer to our contract with the W. J. Burns Detective Agency. Through them we have been able to furnish reports on all investment propositions. We have on file their report on four hundred or more companies they have investigated and we can obtain a detailed report on any one of these companies in twenty-four hours or a report on any company not listed within a very short time. You are to have the privilege tonight of hearing Mr. Barbour speak on the work that they are doing and we know you will find it interesting.

We may only add this—Investigate before buying.

St. John Forum of Fundamentals. St. John is the privilege of a city. The name of Kingston to have a teacher of such calibre come and give of his time and strength as did Arthur F. Shelden, who was here in the early fall. The influence of his teachings in school, factory and forum will be at work in our midst for a long, long time. The number in attendance at the forum meetings held in the High School Auditorium testified to the fact that citizens of Kingston and vicinity realized that they were sitting at the feet of a master teacher with a subject that was vital to every one.

Fire Prevention Week. This year the chamber was glad to cooperate with the local fire department officials in staging a demonstration that would bring home to the people of our city the ever present necessity of carefulness in those things that bring about a decrease in the fire loss from year

Financial and Commercial

New York, Feb. 16.—With the lifting of professional selling pressure from the stock market today and the consequent recovery of industrial specialties which suffered the heaviest reverses in yesterday's downturn, the attention of the financial district was centered on the sale of $75,000,000 New York city corporate stock and gold security bonds.

The bonds were sold at an average price of 101.0589 an income basis of 4.186 per cent. The successful bankers announced that they would offer the bonds at once to the public at 4.15 per cent for the fifty year maturities and from 3.75 per cent upwards for the shorter maturities.

Movements in the stock market were featured by advances of five to ten points in stocks which crumpled so disastrously in the last few sessions.

The recovery of the oil and public utility stocks was the most pronounced. Railroad stocks were conspicuously inactive.

Says Troopers Are Bootleggers

Albany, N. Y., Feb. 16.—State troopers on Long Island were charged with being bootleggers by Assemblyman Doyle, Republican of Suffolk in a speech on the floor of the Assembly today.

The charge was made by Doyle in opposing a bill which would provide for a new bureau of oyster inspectors.

"We have all kinds of inspectors and officers of the law down on Long Island now," said Doyle. "The few state troopers on Long Island are adding the hijackers when they are not bootlegging themselves. It is high time something was done to put a stop to this."

"I suppose if this bill becomes a law we will have a general of the oyster inspectors whose duty it will be to see that each oyster has its teeth brushed and its finger nails properly manicured every day. The whole idea is silly and should be laughed out of the legislature."

The bill was passed, all the Democrats and Boyle voting against it.

Rafael Ramon Govin, father of Mrs. John D. Schoonmaker, Jr., of this city, whose sudden death from heart disease occurred early Sunday morning at the Grand Hotel, Montecito, had many friends in Ulster county where for a number of years he has owned an extensive estate, in the town of Denning. Mr. Govin was president of the Journal of Commerce of New York city and owned several newspapers in Cuba.

Mr. Govin's interests in Cuba had obliged him to go to Havana in December, and he had remained there until a fortnight ago, when he sailed to join his wife in Monte Carlo. They had planned for a holiday trip to several continental cities before returning to New York. Born fifty-eight years ago at Matanzas, Cuba, Mr. Govin received his education at Columbia College and Columbia Law School, New York city. His career thereafter included legal practice, finance and newspaper publishing. While in the law as a young man he was associated at different times with Senator Eastis, Cowdett Brothers and Jones & Govin. His interests besides those mentioned included the presidency of the United States Asphalt & Refining Company and of the International Color Printing Company of Pittston, Pa., of which his son, R. R. Govin, Jr., is president, and was a director of the American Safety Razor Corporation. Among his clubs were the Union, Metropolitan, New York Yacht, and Downtown of New York, and Metropolitan of Washington.

FIRE DEPARTMENT KEPT BUSY ANSWERING CALLS.

Monday afternoon the automobile of Attorney Andrew J. Cook caught fire from a short circuit while the car was parked on John street and the fire department was called. The engine of the fire department was called to the scene and a broken stone pipe caused the place to be filled with soft coal smoke. The same evening a soft coal fire in his hat heater at 26 Albany street was also called on the department. A preventive that is simple and easily made to be thrown on a fire several times during the week. This will tend to eliminate danger from a chimney fire.

Confidence Vote Accorded Briand

Paris, Feb. 16.—Although defeated repeatedly and thwarted constantly in all efforts to obtain funds to balance the badly sagging French national budget, the government of Premier Briand still breathed today as a result of a vote of confidence accorded him this morning at the conclusion of an all night session. The vote was asked after the decisive defeat of the government sales tax measure which has been counted upon to yield 2,500,000,000 francs needed urgently by the treasury.

The belief was widespread in political circles today that after the crushing Briand received in the chamber he cannot fail to resign if that body turns down the government's financial project as a whole.

Her Ninety-first Birthday. On Monday, February 15, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Emma C. Burger of Clintondale, Mrs. Maria Beesimer celebrated her ninety-first birthday. Many friends and relatives extended their congratulations to this remarkable old lady. Despite the fact that she is blind, Mrs. Beesimer has a remarkable faculty for remembering things both in this age and the time when she was young. Mrs. Beesimer was Maria Greco and was born in the town of Rochester, February 15, 1835. Her first husband was Adam Hornbeck. Of this union were born eight children, of whom three are living, Mrs. Mary Quick and Mrs. Emma Burger of Clintondale, and William B. Hornbeck of New Paltz. After her first husband's death in 1874, she was married to Garry Beesimer, who died in 1905. Mrs. Beesimer has three children, twenty grandchildren and sixteen great-grandchildren to congratulate her.

Mrs. Beesimer has enjoyed the best of health for several years. "A long, long, kind, and faithful mother" her daughter Mrs. Beesimer. Whether it was joy or sorrow she was always ready to keep with either word or deed. No matter what the weather, she would go if any one needed her. She has known both heartbreak and work in the old-world that the women of today would never dream of going. Every friend joins in wishing her a happy birthday and hopes she will live to enjoy many more.

Mother's Cook Book

There is very little difference between one man and another, but that little is very important.

It is a greater compliment to be trusted than to be loved.

HINTS AND GOOD THINGS

DELIGHTFUL little cakes may be decorated with animal crackers dipped in fondant chocolate. Gingerbread men—who ever grows too old to enjoy them?

Add a few drops of lemon juice to boiled rice; it improves the flavor as well as its appearance.

A plain cookie foundation may be used for dozens of small cakes. Nuts, raisins, apples and seeds, coconuts and chocolate all may be used in various ways. The way cookies are shaped makes them more alluring even to grown-ups.

Plain Cookies.

Take one-half cupful of fat, one cupful of sugar, one-fourth cupful of milk, one egg, two teaspoonfuls of baking powder, flavor to taste and add two cupfuls of flour. This recipe is best doubled for most families. Mix and let stand on ice to chill. This helps to roll them out, taking less flour.

Browned Parsnips.

Wash and scrape parsnips and cook until tender in boiling salted water. When cold cut in halves, spread with melted butter and broil.

Prussian Rooks.

Cream two-thirds of a cupful of butter, add one and one-half cupfuls of sugar and three well-beaten eggs. Sift three cupfuls of flour with one-half teaspoonful each of soda, clove, cinnamon and one-fourth teaspoonful of nutmeg; add one-half pound of raisins and the same of walnut meats cut fine. To the flour mixture, alternate with one-half cupful of milk. Beat well and drop by spoonfuls on a buttered baking sheet. These cookies are better a week old.

Serve plain ice cream with a hot maple chocolate sauce, using nuts for a garnish. Such a dessert is rich and satisfying and not difficult to serve.

WHO SAID

"In buying a house, and taking a wife, shut your eyes and commend yourself to God."

THERE is nothing recorded in the life of Charles Pinot Duclos, the author of these words, to indicate that there was in his life the elements of marital unhappiness which would justify the cynicism he voices. Duclos had a varied life and he has left his name on the roll of fame in many capacities.

As a historian he is entitled to be remembered as the author of the ingenious "History of Louis XI" and the "Secret Memoirs on the Reign of Louis XIV."

As a philologist he published some exceedingly interesting studies in the French and Celtic languages which have proved of great value in the world of letters.

As a novelist and wit he has left some excellent examples of his work. In this connection his autobiography cannot be overlooked, for it is both an interesting example of an excellent style and a human document colored by much of the author's native humor.

During his life Duclos won the approval of the French Academy and was rewarded by being made perpetual secretary of that body. His aid in revising the Dictionnaire of the Academy was one of the contributing causes to his being thus honored.

Duclos' death occurred in France in the year 1772 when he was sixty-eight.—Wayne D. McMurray.

Old Harry

We are so accustomed to referring to Satan as the "Old Harry" that we forget to give to the origin of such an expression. "Old Harry" is merely the modern form of "Old Hairy," a name given to the devil because of his supposed hairy appearance.

Actress Dies in Fall from Hotel

New York, Feb. 16.—Miss Pauline Armitage, beautiful stage star, crashed to her death today from the fourteenth story of the Hotel Shelton.

Her body, attired only in pink kimono and night robe, landed at the foot of two pedestrians.

Hotel attendants said they believed she was a victim of somnambulism and had fallen from her window.

Miss Armitage, however, had been under treatment for nervousness. The body landed with such force it was reduced virtually to a pulp. Nearly every bone was broken.

Lewis Ovation A Favorable Sign

Mine Leaders' Friendly Reception Interpreted to Mean Speedy Adoption of Report Ending Coal Strike and Re-opening Mines.

Scranton, Pa., Feb. 16.—The eyes of the anthracite field and of the outside consuming public were focused on this city today as six hundred delegates to the tri-district convention of the United Mine Workers of America gathered to act upon the report of the scale committee which concluded an agreement with the operators in Philadelphia last Friday, ending the coal strike.

Rejection of this agreement means the immediate signing of the pact and the opening of the mines. Rejection would precipitate an industrial crisis, the results of which would be difficult to predict.

John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers of America, and his chief lieutenants who negotiated the mine pact with the anthracite operators were given an ovation by delegates to the tri-district convention when they appeared.

The friendly reception to the mine leaders was interpreted to mean speedy adoption of their report, the signing of the agreement and the immediate re-opening of the mines.

Mary Felt "Squashed"

Mary's knowledge of vegetables was confined to slice dishes on the table. That they looked like "in the rough" she had never given serious consideration. One day it fell to her lot to do the family marketing. Walking between the stands she bought this and that, and then finally spied some extra large heads of cauliflower.

"How much is it if a head?" she asked the vendor.

"Fifteen cents, ma'am. Want two?" As she reached out for the sack, she asked doubtfully, "This is cauliflower, isn't it?"

"No, lady, that's summer squash," said the man behind the stand disgustedly.—Indianapolis News.

Good Bouts at Elks' Smoker

The main bout at the Elks' smoker Monday evening was a slashing affair and went the limit of six rounds to the big surprise of all present. The bout brought together Joe Voelek from Saugerties and Johnny Caplino of this city and both boys fought very hard from start to finish.

In the early rounds of this main battle a couple of knockdowns were scored and it looked dubious, whether the scheduled six rounds would be in order. The semi-final bout was also another fast affair, bringing together Eddie Houlihan and Charlie Fisher. The bout went the slated four rounds, and was very speedy.

The other bouts of the program were all well fought and pleased the boxing enthusiasts present. The Winowski-Dewig match and the Louis-Howman scrap were good exhibitions, as was the Polo-Vollmer bout which was substituted for the Van Buren-Hart match, which ended in the second round when Van Buren injured his hand. George Fisher and Mike Harris also put up a strong bout.

The usual good vaudeville was enjoyed following the bouts and all seemed satisfied with the program.

HOW ATHLETES TREAT STRAINS AND SPRAINS

Gymnasium director advises simple, easy treatment

Hard exercise brings lame muscles—and often bruises and strains as well. An athletic director in a gymnasium at Utica, N. Y., writes that he has found a simple and always effective way of treating them.

"Just pat on a little Sloan's Liniment, as the bottle says, without rubbing. It takes out stiffness and pain as nothing else will. We have it always on hand and we think it is the best ever."

Sloan's gives real help because it doesn't just deaden the pain; it gets at the cause. Right to the place that hurts it brings a healing tide of fresh new blood—builds up the injured tissues—clears out the fatigue poisons.

Almost at once you feel relief. Stiffness, swelling, inflammation go down. The pain stops. Get a bottle today and have it on hand. All druggists—35 cents.

Majors Off for Training Camps

New York, Feb. 14.—Major league baseball, minus some of the glamor it knew in the days when Johnny Evers spoke reprovingly to an umpire and Vaddell turned up missing for the most important series of the year, is about to be transferred from the verbal to the competitive stage of its 1926 development. Within a week, most of the sixteen ball clubs will be operating at their training bases.

The Chicago Cubs already are at Catalina Island, proving only that the last shall be first. The Giants and Dodgers are scheduled to leave late this week for Sarasota and Clearwater, respectively, while the champion Pirates will break for Paso Robles, Cal., on Sunday; almost simultaneously with the departure of the Cardinals for San Antonio.

There seems to be no such staidness on the part of American League clubs although many of the Senators are congregating at Tampa while the Browns and Athletics will get underway for Tarpon Springs and Fort Meyers, before Sunday. The advance guard of Yankees will be enroute for St. Petersburg at that time. The Tigers are late starters. Cobb didn't have a ball player at Augusta last year until March 1, and indications are that he will repeat the experiment this season.

The Indians and Red Sox also are scheduled for comparatively late arrivals at Lakeland and New Orleans respectively. Ten of the sixteen clubs will operate in Florida again, to the everlasting satisfaction of the realtors. There may be a new deal, however, next year, some of the clubs claiming that Florida expenses are not as low as some of the Florida lots at flood tide.

INTERNATIONAL TAKES A SLAP AT MAJORS

New York, Feb. 16.—Taking a direct slap at major league baseball in the longest and stormiest session on record, the International League adopted an official schedule early today after refusing to have any part of the resin ball and the new sacrifice rule, recently adopted by the joint rules committee of the major leagues. In so doing it repudiated the action of Babe Gear, minor league representative whose vote with that of Judge Landis served to pass the resin ball resolution.

Delaney-McTigue Bout.

New York Feb. 16.—It was announced that Mike McTigue, former light heavyweight champion, would sign today to meet Jack Delaney on March 15 in Madison Square Garden to get a shot at Paul Berlenbach's title. Delaney accepted terms some days ago.
